HOSTILE WITNESSES CONTINUE IN FOURTH DAY OF STATE TRIAL

Raymond Dereume, Treasurer of Jefferson Co. Democratic Committee Appears

REFRESHES MEMORY

Appeared Unable To Recall Details Despite Promptings by Prosecution

By Raymond Wilcock
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Mar. 28—"Hostile" witnesses continued to confront the prosecution today as the macing trial of eight Democratic leaders, headed by State Chairman David L. Lawrence and State Committee Secretary Ralph M. Bashore, entered its fourth day in Dauphin County Court.

Raymond Dereume, of Punxsutawney, treasurer of the Jefferson County Democratic Committee from 1936-38 and one of several witnesses whom Prosecutor Earl V. Compton has termed "hostile" to the Commonwealth's case, again took the stand.

Dereume spent considerable time yesterday "refreshing his memory" concerning correspondence he had with the State Committee regarding Thomas Lewis, a mine inspector, who reportedly refused to pay his political assessments. He seemed unable to recall the details despite promptings by the prosecution.

Earlier, H. R. Spicher, Indiana County Democratic Chairman, testified that he conferred with Lawrence and a co-defendant, Carl K. Deen, State Committee resident secretary, concerning the collection of contributions from State employees but that no coercive methods were ever employed against State workers.

Spicher, who has been named by the prosecution as a "co-conspirator" but has not been indicted, testified on cross-examination that he had never entered into any "illegal arrangement" with the defendants to coerce employees. Later the Court ordered the

Sight Plane Wreck

Leamington, Ontario, Mar. 28—Sighted a wreck on the Leamington-Pelee Island, an airplane which crashed on the Lake Erie ice, today left little hope that its four occupants were alive.

(Editor's note: The United States Coast Guard station at Marblehead, Ohio, reported it had been advised officially that the mail plane had been reached and all four occupants were dead.)

The pilot who sighted the plane said the fuselage and wings of the mail plane were scattered over 150 feet, on rough ice, four miles from the mainland. He reported no signs of life among the desolate ice surrounding the wreckage.

Peter Mannherz Dies At Edgely; Ill Long Time

EDGELY, Mar. 28—Peter Mannherz, Sr., a resident of this section for the past 35 years, died at his home, 12 Riverview avenue, yesterday, after a lengthy illness. He was a native of Austria-Hungary.

Mannherz, a barber by trade, who for years conducted a shop in Bristol, is survived by his wife, Elizabeth T. Mannherz; one daughter, six sons, and two grandchildren.

He was a member of Bristol Lodge No. 970, B. P. O. Elks.

The Rev. James R. Gailey, pastor of Bristol Presbyterian Church, will officiate at the funeral service on Saturday at 2 p.m., from the late home of the deceased. Burial in Tullytown Cemetery will be in charge of George Molden, funeral director. Friends may call Friday evening.

Welles Returns To U.S.

New York, Mar. 28—Admitting only that "every co-operation was given to me to get the information for which I was sent," Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's fact-finding envoy to warring Europe, returned today on the Conte de Savoia.

Welles was met at the pier by police, who convoyed him to a train for Washington.

The Under Secretary of State, who was sent abroad to explore the possibilities of peace in Europe, was reticent about discussing his trip, except that he carried on under the physical strain of an attack of influenza.

Find Headless Body

Philadelphia, Mar. 28—The headless body of three-weeks-old Beatrice Menichella was found wrapped in a burlap bag in a basement coal bin today, shortly after the infant's mother discovered her missing from her crib.

Apparently hacked off by a butcher knife, the head also had been wrapped in the sack and tossed along with the child's form into the cellar hiding place in the family's Tacony home.

A newly-washed knife, which police theorized was the instrument used by the slayer, was discovered in the kitchen sink.

Awakening this morning, the mother, Mrs. Mary Menichella, screamed when she saw the bassinet empty. Her cries awakened her husband, Michael, a relief recipient; her son by another marriage, Vincent Nardino, 17; three other children, and neighbors. Vincent notified police and two patrolmen discovered Beatrice's body.

'PHONE CO. TO ESTABLISH OFFICE AT MORRISVILLE

Purchases Ground On Stockham Avenue As Site For New Dial Central Office

TO SPEND ABOUT $128,000

MORRISVILLE, Mar. 28—The Bell Telephone Company has purchased a piece of ground at 232 Stockham avenue, for the site of a new dial central office building to serve Morrisville. At the present time, Morrisville telephone subscribers are served from Trenton.

The lot has a frontage of 99 feet on Stockham avenue and is 145 feet deep. It is proposed to construct a one-story brick building of Colonial design to house the dial mechanism and associated equipment. When the building is completed and the apparatus installed, it is expected to provide adequate telephone facilities for the continued growth of Morrisville, according to J. Howard Reiff, manager for the company.

The entire project, which is expected to be completed in the spring of 1941, including the purchase of the ground, construction of the building, installation of the central office equipment and rearrangement of certain outside plant facilities, will represent an expenditure of approximately $128,000.

Guests Enjoy Cards As Mrs. Grace Entertains

EDGELY, Mar. 28—Mrs. William Grace entertained cards yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Bergmann, guests being: Mrs. Eugene Taylor, Mrs. William Heinecke, Mrs. Mark Walter, Mrs. George Bintliff, Sr., Mrs. Walter Scott, Mrs. Mary Watson, Mrs. Harold Bergmann.

A handkerchief shower was tendered Mrs. Grace, Mrs. Heinecke, and Mrs. Watson in honor of their natal anniversaries. Decorations were in keeping with the Easter season, each lady receiving a decorated egg. Highest scores were obtained by Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Bintliff. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

It Seems Hardly Human

Washington, March 27—
THERE might be more sympathy for Mr. Paul V. McNutt, the Indian a hero, whose friends contend that he is being "slowly assassinated" by an inspired Internal Revenue Department investigation of his financial affairs, if he did not persist in publicly licking the boots of those who are so cruelly kicking him.

—o—
In other words, Mr. McNutt is taking it "lying down." And it isn't easy to warm to a man, however innocent, who, wincing from his wounds, greedily praises those who inflict them. The fact is that with the ordinary citizen the extent of his indignation would be an accurate measure of his innocence. The more complete the absence of guilt the hotter the righteous wrath. That is the rule. Perhaps it is politeness, perhaps it is his lovely and forgiving nature, but certainly Mr. McNutt's reactions are not those usual under such circumstances.

—o—
THIS is not to intimate that Mr. McNutt is remotely guilty of wrongdoing. On the contrary, there is every reason to believe he is not. It is merely to point out that few men in his position could continue to smile so sweetly upon the people who are sticking the knife into him and turning it around.

His patient sufferings are almost without parallel; his meekness beyond belief. For months without a word of reproach he has watched the New Dealers with whom he is affiliated in Washington and with whom he professes to see eye to eye politically, sabotage his expensively constructed Presidential candidacy and smear his personal reputation.

(By "The Stroller")

"Brownie" can jump rope with the best of the youngsters. Each day he joins in this Spring pastime with his pals—and for information of the public, "Brownie" is not a dog.

The master of this friendly little animal is young William Blackburn, Hulmeville, known to all his pals as "Brickie." So when "Brickie" and his friends play "high-low water," that age-old custom of jumping across a rope, which is raised a few inches each time the group attempts to negotiate it, "Brownie" skims over, too. The girls and boys make their leap, and with a whistle from "Brickie" the dog takes his turn.

MARS GROWS HUNGRIER

The current high cost of war is graphically brought out in the current monthly letter of the National City Bank of New York, which states that the costs of the war in Western Europe are beginning at a point where those of the World War left off and are still rising. Yet military operations have not approached the 1918 scale and commodity prices are only half as high as they were then.

It is said that the increased cost of military equipment is one reason for the growing fiscal appetite of Mars. England reports that aircraft for military use is three to seven times more costly than in 1918. And, strangely enough, it costs twice as much to maintain a division in the field as it did then. This must mean caviar to more than the general!

British budgetary expenditures are reported to be running at an annual rate of approximately $9,600,000,000. On a population basis, this is said to be equivalent to budgetary expenses for the United States of more than $27,000,000,000 a year. To translate this into income and other taxes for the American citizen would stagger one. It would, in fact, be equivalent to almost one-half the total income of the American people. Yet the London Economist predicts that Britain's war expenses will go higher, may almost double year after next if the war should last.

French war costs for 1940 together with its civil budget have been estimated at approximately $7,400,000,000, equivalent on a population basis to about $23,000,000,000 for the United States.

LIVING BY PHILOSOPHY

Not many people make life interesting by philosophy now. It is considered easier to buy one's fun. So people pay theaters, dance halls, the sporting clubs, etc., to provide diversions for them.

In simpler times people used to find enjoyments without paying for them, which can be called living by philosophy. They sat on the porches on summer evenings instead of burning up the roads, and they found pleasure in observing the ways of nature and her creatures. Or they hid themselves to the corner grocery where they exchanged nuggets of wisdom with their neighbors. They lived a contemplative life, conversing, reading and observing.

Modern life will not revert to the old ways, but it should not wholly forget how to live by philosophy. It helps out when faith in man-made things wavers.

PENNY ECONOMIES

In New York City a contest has been conducted among city employees for prize-winning suggestions on saving public money. Among several hundred proposals was: "Attach pull cords to all light in city buildings so that only those actually needed will be used." This won a $5 award.

The simplicity of the idea might at first thought provoke a smile. I contrasts so broadly with so many evidences of much greater waste in handling public affairs. Yet who shall say that the influence of such an improvement might not be salutary? It is just the sort of little economy that would be understood by the average home owner, and such would impress the rank amateur of public servants in city buildings and elsewhere.

Among the loans was one for $40,000.

The CAIRO GARTER MURDERS By VAN WYCK MASON

CHAPTER XXVI

"I'm going to tell you something, Hugh. By the bye, I'm calling you 'Hugh' just to pique that Black fellow," Moira continued.

Sensing opportunity, he seized it. "Ha! Miss Black was invited on this so interesting cruise?"

"Yes," Moira said in a matter-of-fact tone, "but she's not coming and you know it. Oh, I won't look deep and mysterious—Stag told me, of course, how she was killed in an auto accident on the desert last night. Well, 'tis no great loss," she continued so calmly that North was left breathless. "But as I was going to say, well—I suppose I shouldn't tell you, but I'm going to—I have a connection with the Anglo-Egyptian police."

"You have!" Nothing if not convincing was North's exclamation, and he smiled softly.

"And now you . . . you will help me?" A sudden uprush of eagerness invaded her manner. "You won't find Clive—er—the government ungrateful. I can promise you that whatever you stand to lose by cooperation with me will be amply repaid. Are you game, Captain?"

His deliberation lasted a good two minutes. "I'm game, but I doubt if Messra, Heineman and Schlager would be so sporting."

"Why?" They'd make just as much.

"So you say. No, on their account I'd have to have some sort of a guarantee covering the sum they expect to clear from the shipment."

"I have dealt with governments before, my dear. Their memory can be lumped with the gratitude of kings."

Moira made a quick impatient gesture. "Oh, you stupid! It isn't only the government I'm talking about. Tell me, would any certified cheque made out to cash satisfy you?"

He lost her eyes and her reaction momentarily defied his analysis. "I suppose so, but who is this other source of revenue?"

"That I can't tell you," the girl cried softly, "but I think we can get the man I'm after to pay you a huge sum of money." She looked up at him, a challenge on her bright, impudent mouth. "How about it?"

"You suggest a very pleasing transaction," North said, settling back in his chair.

"Good. Then that is settled."

Moira bent forward until a strand of soft hair brushed his cheek.

"Here is what you are to do. When someone whom you already know approaches you about these munitions your firm has on the high seas, you will throw in with him. Sell him your entire shipment," she urged, an incurable, half-mocking, cease plucking at her mouth corners. "Will you do this?"

"I don't know, Moira; all this sounds pretty risky."

"Please! Please, Hugh, I'd do almost anything to win your help."

"Well, maybe I'll do as you ask but first I've got to see a certified cheque to cover my canceled contracts, plus the price of the rest of the cargo, plus something as interest."

"Ah, I'm glad you asked for that, Hugh. Real salesmen have a weakness for extra commissions."

Until now I haven't been too sure that you are really what you say you are."

They finished their drinks, then in replacing her glass Moira cast him a slow look. "I'll have that charge for you after dinner. How soon's should it be for?"

It was hard for Hugh North to maintain a pose of casual interest. "Oh, really?" he said. "At the Restaurant des Pyramides or Shepard's?"

statement stricken from the record until the prosecution had delved into that part of its case which concerns the alleged use of threats to collect political contributions.

Isaac Maxwell Simpson, an Indiana minister, said he was employed by the Indiana County Democratic Committee to "make collections from State employees," for which he was promised a five per cent commission. He made no collections, he testified, but added that Spicher; Mrs. Grace Lahr, Indiana County vice-chairman; and William Tomb, another committee member, collected $725.

Highlights of yesterday's proceedings included testimony brought out on cross-examination by the defense that $351,249 was collected by the Democratic State Committee from State employees between January 15, 1935, and July 31, 1938, for the Democratic "war chest." This represented only 38 per cent of the quota of $901,257 assessed against all 67 counties.

North said without turning a hair. "Or half a million dollars if you prefer. Half in advance and half on receipt of goods."

She blinked. "You're a hard bargainer, Captain. Well, so be it. I'm thinking you won't be sorry. Now, remember what I said. You're to—

"An Egyptian?"

"No. It's funny, but I'd almost swear she was an American. Major Kilgour was a bit high hat, though. He only nodded when I waved. He looked worried."

"Did you notice anything else about Kilgour's companion—or the car he was in?"

She cast him a surprised look. "No, I had only a glimpse. Why the interest?"

"Just idle curiosity. I hardly know your British military friend."

Then you're missing something. Major Kilgour is simply crazy over him! Only you're much nicer even if she won't admit it."

"What made you think the other man hard-looking?"

"Why, his nose was a little twisted—you know like a football player's and the top of his left ear looked as if he had been hurt."

North took a deep gulp of his highball. So? And it was after this that Stag Melhorne had driven him into the desert.

"Ah, Captain, such a pleasant surprise?" Mrs. Ladd's greeting was graciousness itself. "You have been so charming to my stepdaughter, I can hardly thank you enough," she went on when Lolita was captured by a stalwart young Frenchman and led off to a little dance floor built upon the dahabah's afterdeck.

A breeze blowing down the Nile ruffled the water and blew aside a jet curl arranged low over Mrs. Ladd's forehead, briefly exposing a small design resembling a five-branched candlestick tattooed just below the apex of her "widow's peak."

To his astonishment the effect of the ultra-modern lines against the extraordinary whiteness of her skin was pleasing rather than grotesque.

"I see you have noticed?" She smiled, not at all annoyed by his startled expression.

"Yes, and I can't help wondering about it," he confessed.

"It is a relic of a romantic childhood," she explained in her vigorous, deep-pitched voice. "You see, Captain, when I was only four I was stolen by some Kurdish raiders of my father's mission in Syria. The tribesmen took me back to the mountains, and Papa, being only a poor Welsh missionary, couldn't even begin to raise the ransom they asked. The Turks did nothing to rescue me, so the Kurds made a Mohammedan of me—that was when I got this tattooing—and prepared me some day to be sold into a zenana. But fortunately, before that could happen, the war came and a British expedition rescued me. Voilà tout."

North looked his interest. "It must be a great help to your husband to have you so familiar with Oriental languages."

"I do what I can," Zara Ladd murmured. "It is not a great deal. You must visit the college next week! Lolita and my friend, Miss McLeod, will be there."

"Miss McLeod?"

"Yes, Moira McLeod. She is an old friend—so amusing."

"Well, Mrs. Ladd, I'll see if I can manage it," North promised with a smile.

The Great Game of Politics

THE Treasury investigation of his income, of course, is the most shocking thing done to him, but it is by no means all. Almost from the day the President brought him to Washington the Roosevelt aides have hacked at his candidacy until it began to crumble. New Deal journalists who reflect the "inner circle" vituperatively assaulted him. The "inner circles" themselves disputed the genuineness of his New Dealism and spread disparaging little stories about him. When his managers, in an excess of zeal, overplayed their hand, Mr. Roosevelt practically pulled the plug on Mr. McNutt by laughing over his discomfiture at a press conference.

—o—

BUT, even before the sniping became pronounced, the "Treasury investigation" in Indiana was under way. Supposed to be secret, every newspaper reader in the country knows now that the Treasury is "investigating" Mr. McNutt. Although if has been going on for seven months, although nothing whatever has been found to discredit Mr. McNutt, although long ago he voluntarily turned over his safe-deposit keys and private records—still the "investigation" continues. The Treasury agents will neither conclude their work nor give him a clean bill of health.

—o—

HIS friends contend that this is a form of calculated political murder inspired by some one "higher up." Unquestionably both these allegations are true. It is interesting to note that they were also true in the case of the late Mr. Mellon, who was pilloried as a tax evader, prosecuted by the then Assistant Attorney General, Mr. Jackson, held up by the New Deal propagandists as a horrible example, only to be completely vindicated after his death. It is a lasting shame to the Administration that in that case no word of apology or regret was ever uttered.

—o—

THAT Mr. McNutt should supinely submit to what is being done to him is really extraordinary. He knows, of course, that someone in the Administration has inspired the "investigation." The investigators would long ago have wound up their work if it were a normal investigation. All the commentators are agreed about that. The natural question would seem to be who is this "higher up." It, of course, is not Mr. Morgenthau, Mr. Morgenthau, on his own initiative, would never dream of such a thing. It couldn't be Mr. Roosevelt. That would entail a degree of duplicity and depravity in which few would believe.

—o—

BUT, if not Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Morgenthau, who then? It must be someone high enough up to have a good deal of influence and no one has that kind of influence who is not linked in with the so-called inner circle. It may be absurd to think Mr. Roosevelt has directed this himself, but it is not quite as absurd to think that he knows who is doing it and not absurd at all to contend that if he does not know, he could find out and stop it.

—o—

IT would seem natural, after months of this slow torture, for Mr. McNutt to go to his friend, the President, explain what is being done, denounce those who are doing it and insist upon its being stopped. It would seem natural for a President to be indignant at such abuse of Administration power and visit his displeasure upon those responsible. Neither of these things has happened, and the "investigation" continues devastatingly for Mr. McNutt, but filling the inner circle with delight. That the President is aware of the facts is certain. There has been far too wide publication of them for him to be in ignorance.

—o—

WHEN the whole business is considered it does seem that Mr. McNutt, the New Dealer, is getting an exceedingly raw deal from the New Dealers. But what does he do about it? Bleeding from every pore, he continues to dish out fulsome praise of the New Deal, attribute to it all the known virtues; servilely declare that he is only an "Roosevelt does not run" candidate. It seems hardly human. Until he himself exhibits some natural resentment at his treatment by the Administration he lands, he can scarcely expect others to resent it.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Ernst Lubitsch brings his favorite of all stories to the screen in "The Shop Around the Corner," starring Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart and opening today at the Grand Theatre for an engagement of two days.

Because he was set on having Miss Sullavan and Stewart for the leading roles in his romantic comedy-drama, and they were not available when he signed to produce and direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Lubitsch first directed Greta Garbo in the hilarious satirical comedy, "Ninotchka."

Then he turned his attention to "The Shop Around the Corner."

BRISTOL THEATRE

A gripping story of human heartbreak is brought to the screen in "Thou Shall Not Kill," Republic drama which opened yesterday at the Bristol Theatre.

Dealing with the problems of a maladjusted young man, ostracized by a society which does not understand him, it follows his downfall and his ultimate regeneration at the hands of a kindly and sympathetic minister.

RITZ THEATRE

Meet the happy newlyweds who found love in an office but lost it when they moved in that little rose-covered cottage and were swamped by the high cost of "Society" living! They're Stuart Erwin and Marjorie Weaver, of "The Honeymoon's Over," comedy which opened yesterday at the Ritz Theatre.

They're "Calling All Marines" this week at the Ritz Theatre.

Landscapes As Seen From Studios To Be Portrayed

The New Hope Art Associates open their new show on April 2nd with Harold Bowler featured as third "Artist of the Month."

Mr. Bowler is a young American artist who is fast winning recognition as a painter of portraits and flower studies. He won the Hazard prize at the Syracuse University which enabled him to go abroad to study. In this country he now divides his time between New York and his studio in Carversville. He works prolifically and is much in demand as a portrait painter of people prominent in various walks of life. Two portraits considered among his best known works are those of Cordell Hull and vice-president John Nance Garner. He has also painted many prominent dancers, including Ruth St. Denis, Fokline and Ted Shawn.

Mr. Bowler's flower studies are widely acclaimed. He has done a series of flower paintings for all the Tuberculosis Hospitals in New York. His work was featured at the recent New York flower show, and is now being exhibited in several shops on Park and Fifth avenues. Mr. Bowler also lectures on art, and recently spoke before a women's group in New York on "Why a Portrait?"

As "Artist of the Month" for April, he will show three landscapes painted from three studio windows; one in Paris, one in New York and the third in Carversville. All works reveal a wide variety of color and approach. In addition to the three landscapes there will be two portraits and one of his famous flower studies.

The New Hope Art Associates, a co-operative venture opened last December, announced that visitors to date have numbered in excess of 1,200. Ten important works of art have been sold and there are now 12 new artists on the waiting membership list.

LENTEN LOGIC

If you're faced with the problem of meatless meals throughout Lent, we'll set great store by this recipe for Codfish Cakes. Here is a main course dish with a lot of heft and savor to it. A substantial dish made of salty shreds of codfish mixed with fluffy mashed potatoes, seasoned with rich butter and eggs and a generous lollipop of tomato ketchup. It's the ketchup that really turns the trick and makes a man-sized dinner dish of this. Tart, tasty ketchup made from prime tomatoes cooked in the old time, down-on-the-farm fashion, with cider vinegar and a sweet-smelling spice bag added for seasoning. I tell you, there's a heap of mighty good eating in this combination—codfish cakes with ketchup. Then add a tin of ready-to-serve spaghetti and a smidgen of pepper, then cook just until the spaghetti is heated through.

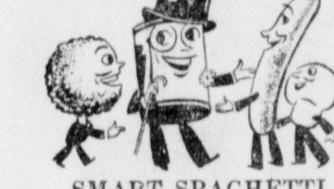

a fine mixer, too, if you want to catch a canful. There's some splendid teamwork when you combine those luscious, tasty strands with left-over meats, hamburger balls, diced frankfurters or mushrooms. Or, have you ever tried serving spaghetti with sizzled beef? There's a quick one for you and a good one, too. All you need is about  $\frac{1}{4}$  of a cup of finely shredded dried beef, some onion shreds and snippets of green pepper. Just brown one small onion, chopped, and one small green pepper in about 3 tablespoons butter. Add the beef and let the whole thing sizzle along for a few minutes until the beef begins to get nice and crimped around the edges. Then add a tin of ready-to-serve spaghetti and a smidgen of pepper, then cook just until the spaghetti is heated through.

THRIFTY TRICK

Combine—
2 cups flaked or shredded salt codfish.
3 cups diced raw potatoes. Simmer together in water to cover until potatoes are quite tender. Drain, mash, then beat until fluffy.

Add, mixing well—
2 tablespoons butter
2 eggs, well beaten
2 tablespoons tomato ketchup. Drop by heaping tablespoons onto a greased hot griddle, flattening into round cakes with spoon. Brown on both sides. Serve with ketchup. (Makes 12 medium sized cakes.)

SMART SPAGHETTI

Did you know you don't have to add a thing to ready-to-serve spaghetti obtainable in cans? It's mighty good eating just as it comes from the tin. All you have to do is open, heat and serve. But it's

O'TOOLE PINNED TO MAT BY PLUMMER

TRENTON, N. J., Mar. 28.—Tommy O'Toole, strapping Texas Irishman who seemed to have a monopoly on winning matches at the Arena, had his victory string cut at 11 last night when Lou Plummer, fellow Texan, flattened him after 26 minutes.

O'Toole was on the receiving end of plenty of abuse as the muscular Plummer punched and gouged his way to victory. Time and again Plummer treated the Irish lad to strangle-holds, eye-gouges and other tactics that are strictly taboo in the catch-as-catch-can game.

The fans were all for O'Toole, and took their wrath out on Referee Matt Poljanick every time the arbiter refused to break a hold in which their favorite was being punished. Plummer was roundly booted as the referee raised his hand in victory.

A corking battle was waged by Maurice LaChapelle, nimble Frenchman, and Emil Dusek, of the Omaha Riot Squad, in the semi-windup. The match ended in a draw, but the sympathetic followers of the Frenchman thought he should have been declared the winner.

Waiven Bockwinkle made his local debut in the third match and tossed Joe Maynard, Chicago roughneck, after nine minutes. Bockwinkle appeared on the verge of defeat, but rallied to subdue the Chicago entry with a series of flying mares.

Cliff Olson, maddcap Minnesota Swede, proved to be the best crowd-baiter of the night, although he lost the decision to Abe Yourist in the second match. Olson took great delight in threatening over-anxious ring siders, who proceeded to make his evening hectic one.

Matros Kirilinko returned to the local Arena after a long absence to win the opener from Jim Austeri after 12 minutes.

SOFTBALL LEAGUE PLANS FOR SEASON

A meeting of the Bristol Community Softball League was held in the Fifth Ward Sporting Club, Pond street, last night. The meeting was called by WPA recreation leader, Samuel Moffo.

Represented at the meeting were the following clubs: Grundys, Mill Street Boys' Club, Fifth Ward, Rohm and Haas, Franklin, P. O. S. of A., St Ann's, Bristol Aces, DiRenzo's, Voltz, Texaco and Fleetwings.

Tentative plans were made for the forthcoming season and it is the hope of the officials that this season's circuit will be just as successful as last season which was won by the Fifth Ward team.

The following officers were elected: President, Daniel DiLorenzo; secretary, Pat Capiucci, and treasurer, Samuel Mastriano.

The next meeting is scheduled to be held at the Franklin A. C. clubhouse April 8.

Dr. George Fox Speaks On Control of Cancer

treatments by X-rays, radium and surgery, and stated that "If we all work together, the day will come when we won't hear much of cancer."

In considering the "inclusion theory," Dr. Fox showed a small human embryo, two months gestation, explaining that contained therein were sufficient cells to account at maturity for all bones, two sets of teeth, and all portions of a human body. He stated that it is the general belief among physicians that at maturity some cells do not stop growing, so that more may be formed than required. "Thus we may possibly find bone cells in the lungs, hair cells in the stomach, etc." In mentioning cases wherein hair cells and fully-formed teeth have been discovered in some abdominal tumors, "So cancer and tumor possibly come into the body in the embryo stage."

Discussions of cancerous or tumorous condition in the early stages came in for some discussion, annual physical check-ups being the best method for combatting the group was told. That constant irritation, a possible great aid in growth of cancer, can be eliminated, when early discovery is made, was another point stressed; then the speaker explained how stomach cancer and other forms are located by means of X-ray, and cancer of the lungs by direct view through new inventions.

That a large number of people having cancer treated at an early stage, have lived long period of years, was another point well brought out, as Dr. Fox urged the men and women to not look upon the subject with fear, but with an enlightened attitude, being ready to aid their physician in the fight against the dread curse.

Dr. Fox expressed appreciation to Dr. John J. Shaw for free distribution of serum for pneumonia cases during the past season. He told of the saving of the life of one Bristol man in this manner, adding that in case of death, which without the serum was inevitable, the state would have spent thousands of dollars in years to come for care of the wife and eight children.

"The amount needed in such cases would have far exceeded the entire sum spent for pneumonia serum in Bucks County during the past winter."

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Minerva Epstein, Bristol, who explained that discussions of this type are sponsored by the Division of Health Education, Pennsylvania Department of Health, which is carrying on an intensive educational campaign. The business session was in charge of Mrs. Joseph Muchlow.

Hobby Show Planned For The Month of May

school children are busy making models preparatory to exhibiting them here in the Spring when the place and time have been decided.

In behalf of Buckingham boys and girls, John Evans, who teaches industrial arts, is aiding them.

Three County Seat boys, Donald Devow, Jack Moore, and Russell Hager, are most enthusiastic about the hobby show which will also include boats and racers.

The Buckingham and Doylestown township mentors will hold contests in which the models from these schools will be judged on the basis of construction and appearance.

When the hobby show is staged here, in connection with a national contest to be held in Chicago, an effort will be made to procure judges, including Wilfred R. Webb, who will serve as the judge of airplane models, to select the prize winning exhibits.

Robert M. Mountenay will be in charge of the boats, and Clifford Frater of the racers.

The prize-winning models of the show will be sent to Chicago, where they will compete for prizes in the National Airmeet contest in that city later in the summer.

Minimize Protest

LONDON, Mar. 28—Amid increasing signs of coming warfare in the Pacific Ocean, Soviet Russian circles in London sought today to minimize the importance of a protest delivered to the British government, yesterday, by Russian Ambassador Ivan Maisky.

Maisky, in a talk with Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, protested against British detention of two Soviet vessels at Hongkong. The Soviet ships were intercepted by British warships near Japan.

Russian circles in London insisted that Maisky's protest was merely routine, and pointed out that he had delivered a verbal, rather than written protest to Lord Halifax.

At the same time, the British government spokesman was asked to comment on reports that the British ambassador to Russia, Sir William Seeds, would shortly return to Moscow. He replied:

"It is quite clear that Sir William's vacation is not yet up."

Neutral observers were inclined to regard the protest as an indication of Moscow's anxiety to obtain some elucidation of Britain's attitude toward Russia, in view of intense anti-Soviet press campaign, launched in France, in connection with the recall to Moscow of Jacob Suritz, Russian ambassador to Paris, at the request of the French government.

(France demanded recall of Suritz because of a telegram, signed by him and addressed to Josef Stalin, which referred to Anglo-French war instigation. British circles insisted the dispute between France and Russia would not affect Anglo-Russian relations.)

Commenting on the detention of the ships, the London Daily Herald said the British Navy is closing Germany's "back door at Vladivostok."
